The Ottoman Army, commanded by our Pacha, encamps under Nicomedia. All our Fortreſſes ſwarm with Janiſſaries; and we are putting ourſelves into the beſt State of Defence. Nevertheleſs, if we may believe ſome intelligent Perſons, we are likely ſoon to return under the Dominion of the Greeks; but others, perhaps not ſo well informed of the Strength and Abilities of Heraclius, and of his Connections with foreign Powers, perſuade themſelves that the Georgians will ſpeedily fall again into Bondage, and with them all Chriſtians of the Empire.

LONDON, May 17.

A Letter from Batavia of the 22d of October, 1765, gives the following Summary of the Dutch Succeſſes in the Iſle of Ceylon—"During the laſt Campaign, which was opened about the Middle of January, nine Battles were fought, in which the Enemy were totally defeated. As ſoon as the Dutch had clambered the Mountains and taken the Fortreſſes, that defended them, the Reſidence of Candy was immediately reduced, the King driven to the remote Mountains of the Kingdom of Oeva, towards Batticalo, and the Royal Family obliged to fly from Mandamanoere, a Caſtle of the Kingdom of Matale: Thus the Pride of the Court of Candy has been humbled, the Blood of the Dutch that had been ſhed there avenged, the Honour of their Company vindicated and extended over all the Weſtern Parts of the Indies.——But ſcarce was the brave Baron Van-Eck, their Governor, returned to Colombo, when he died after ten Days Illneſs."

The latter died ſoon after, and Prince Heraclius ſucceeded him, not under the Title of King, which he refuſed, but with that of Commander in Cheif of the Georgian Army, and he has now two hundred thouſand Men under his Command. Account of the late Occurrences and preſent Situation of Affairs in the Eaſt-Indies.

Artillery-Cantonments at Banaras in the Empire of Indoſtan, Aug. 25, 1765.

"You have before heard, that there was one Part of the Army beſieging Chunar-gur Fort, and another employed before Ilyabad, the Accounts of the Surrender of both theſe will now have reached you. The Army joined at Ilyabad (or Heliabas, as it is called in moſt Maps,) which is the Capital of the Country, lying betwixt the Rivers Yumna and Ganges, called the Gorra Country, and on the very Point of Land where theſe Rivers join. Dehli is 300 Miles from Ilyabad, which is a very ſtrong Fort, with high and exceeding thick Walls, and a large City without. From thence General Carnack, with the moſt of the Army, ſet out, about the firſt of March, and till the Middle of April continued ſettling the Country all around, during which no enemy was to be ſeen.

"At the End of that Month, however, Souja Dowla began again to make his Appearance. The Marratas having taken up Arms, croſſed the Yumna, which ſeparates their Country from the Gorra. This formerly likewiſe belonged to them, but was conquered by one of Souja's Anceſtors, and added to his own Territories; they thought this was a favourable Opportunity of regaining their old Poſſeſſion, and ſo raiſed Troops, under pretence of aſſiſting Souja againſt the Engliſh. Our General was, by this, obliged to march towards the Ganges, where he arrived on the 3d of May, and found the Marrattas on the oppoſite Banks. The Sea-Poys croſſed the River firſt, upon which the Enemy fell back, and made Way for our whole Army; after ſome firing they took to Flight, retired to the Yumna and recroſſed that River to their own Country; the Britiſh Troops followed, and even drove them from the Banks of it, and took a Fort belonging to them, which we put into the Poſſeſſion of one of the Rajas in our Intereſt.

"The above Engagement was on the Weſt Side of the Ganges, about 60 corſs higher up than Ilyabad: Souja was at ſome Diſtance, with a ſmall Body of Troops, waiting the Event, but did not chuſe to interfere. In purſuing the Marattas, the Army underwent incredible Fatigue, this Gorra Country being quite the reverſe of that on the Eaſt of the Ganges; it is almoſt barren, Water vaſtly ſcarce, and very bad: But what is ſtill worſe, the Marrattas in their Flight having murdered all the Inhabitants of the Villages, threw their dead Bodies, with the Carcaſes of Dogs, Horſes, &c. into all the Wells from which the Army was obliged to drink; and add to all this, the exceſſive Heat in the Months of April, May and June; the Wind every Forenoon blowing ſo hot, that it is hardly poſſible to keep your Face that Way; this cauſes great Sickneſs, the Men often drop down dead on the March, or when too haſtily ſatisfying their Thirſt.

"Towards the Cloſe of May, having thus diſperſed the Enemy all around, the Army began to march back to the Ganges, where we found it neceſſary to halt ſome Time to refreſh. Then Souja finding his Country all gone, and about to be given to another, whom the King ſhould name, thought proper to ſurrender himſelf to our General on ſuch Terms as Lord Clive ſhould appoint. Summeraw had gone off with all his Artillery, Seapoys, and Part of his Treaſure that he took care to ſecure; with theſe he is ſeeking protection among the other Powers, and offers his Services to them, ſhould we try to eſtabliſh the King.----Thus have the Honourable Company reduced to the moſt abject Submiſſion, a Prince always looked upon as the greateſt of Indoſtan; who at Buxar made himſelf ſure of cutting to Pieces all the Engliſh Army, but happily met with Major Munro, who entirely ruined all his Schemes, and made him ſenſible of his Inability to cope with Britiſh Valour.

"In the Beginning of June the Army began to march down the Country for Banares and Juanpoore, in order to canton, as the Monſoons were now approaching. They all arrived at the above Places in the Beginning of July, and there they now lie. Lord Clive arrived at Calcutta in June, and came to Banares two Weeks ago; his Lordſhip is now ſettling Affairs with the King and Souja Dowla, who will get his Country again, but not till he has heartily paid for intermeddling in Coſſim Ally Caun's War; he is to acknowlege the King as Sovereign, and reimburſe the Company for their Expences during the War.

"The Troops here are put upon a new Footing; they are divided into three Parts, each to conſiſt of one Regiment of European Infantry, one Company of Artillery, and ſeven Battalions of Seapoys, Seven Hundred Rank and File each Battalion. One of theſe Parties ſtays at Ilyabad to proteſt the King and Souja Dowla againſt the Marrattas or any other Power; a Second goes to Patna; and the Third is ſtationed at Calcutta.

"The Country up here is in general much healthier than Bengal; on the Eaſt Side of the Ganges it is extremely pleaſant, very fertile, and would afford a Proſpect nothing inferior to the fineſt Counties in England, were there but ſome more Pains taken in cultivating it. Moſt of the great Mens Houſes are of Stone, few of them are without Gardens, and thoſe very neat, being adorned with Fountains, and ſuch like Decorations."

They entered the city about eleven in the forenoon, and were followed by the populace, who assembled in great numbers, but did not venture to attack them. About the same time a man was seized for insulting a soldier belonging to the Walloons, and was whipped by the executioner.

On Sunday his Royal Highness Prince Henry was at court, for the first time since his fall from his horse at Ascot-Heath races on Monday se'ennight.

It is said that the men, who were upon the discovery in the Dolphin man of war, received double pay, in consequence of their delivering up such papers, plans, &c. as might be in their hands, it being thought improper that any thing should be made publick till another voyage has been made to the above place; after which it is supposed, the publick will be gratified with the account of the discovery.
